With the 3200 GT in 1998 Maserati returned to its roots. The luxury coupé was styled by Italdesign, whose founder and head Giorgetto Giugiaro penned, among others, the classic Ghibli, Bora and Merak.

The 3200 GT shared the Quattroporte IV's and Shamal's twin-turbo 3.2-liter V8, revised and tuned to 370 bhp while the 3200 GTA was equipped with an automatic gearbox and its engine delivered 368 bhp. The top speed is 177 mph (285 km/h), while the 0-60 dash is completed in around 5 seconds. The 104.8 inch wheelbase was just a centimetre longer than that of the Quattroporte IV, explaining the 3200 GT's class-leading cabin space. The car is certainly capable of carrying 4 in comfort.

The most remarkable detail of its design is the tail-lights consisting of the LED diodes placed in the shape of boomerang. The car was replaced in the beginning of 2002
