During the Mondial de l'Automobile 2006, Alfa Romeo announced the production of a limited series of 500 units of the 8C Competizione. The car uses a modified Maserati platform and powertrain and features a Ferrari/Maserati derived 90 degree dry-sump lubricated 4.7-litre V8 assembled by Ferrari. In addition, the carbon fibre body is fitted to a steel chassis, made by Italian company ITCA Produzione.

The six-speed transaxle gearbox has computerized gear selection by means of levers behind the steering wheel and can shift in 175 milliseconds when using Sport mode. The 8C also has a limited slip differential and brakes were described as "phenomenal" by Road & Track magazine. The official top speed was announced to be 292 kilometres per hour (181 mph) but the car is rumoured to be capable of 306 kilometre
