Oldsmobile introduced the Eighty-Eight in 1949. By 1960, the Eighty-Eight was on the final year of fourth generation production. Changes to the 1960 model included a new grille and rear end design. The interior featured a new gauge cluster design and additional space thanks to a smaller transmission tunnel. For the 1960 model year, Oldsmobile produced 12,271 examples of the Dynamic Eighty-Eight Convertible. The Eighty-Eight was produced through the 1999 model year.

This 1960 Oldsmobile Dynamic Eighty-Eight Convertible is presented in white with a power convertible top. The car is powered by a 371-cid, 240-hp V-8 engine which is paired to a Hydra-Matic automatic transmission. Power equipment on the car includes steering and brakes. The interior of the vehicle is presented in blue featuring an electric clock, AM radio, courtesy lamps and Soft-ray tinted glass. This Oldsmobile Dynamic Eighty-Eight has reportedly been cosmetically restored over the years.
