EXTERIOR

Meticulously hand painted in an exquisitely rich shade of blue/grey, named by McLaren as Saros Blue, this 720S exudes an imposing malevolence. The track focused, angular lines created with every bit of surgical-like precision makes for a truly spectacular visual impact.

Benefiting from a full Paint Protection Film (PPF) fitted by McLaren from new the body naturally remains blemish free.

INTERIOR

The driver focused interior intensifies the thrill of driving the 720S, leaving no stone unturned in the quest to optimise performance without compromising driver engagement. From the liberal use of weight-saving Alcantara and carbon fibre throughout the cabin, to the luxuries of navigation, climate control, media ports, and a central touchscreen, the 720S has perhaps the perfect balance between drivability and performance.

The carbon fibre tub used in the 720S chassis is based on the similar principle of the MonoCage unit in the P1 but is 18 kg lighter than its predecessor. Called the MonoCage II, the tub allows for dihedral doors with large cut outs for easier entry and exit. It also reduces the size of the pillars of the roof, improving visibility for the driver. The same tub underpins the Senna and the Speedtail sports cars.

ENGINE & TRANSMISSION

The 720S features McLaren's new M840T engine which is an evolution of the M838T used in the 650S. It is a 3,994 cc twin-turbocharged V8 engine. However, the stroke has been lengthened by 3.6 mm to increase the capacity and 41% of the engine's components are new. The engine uses new twin-scroll turbochargers which have a low inertia titanium-aluminium turbines which spin with maximum efficiency. The engine has a rated power output of 720 ps at 7,000 rpm, as such giving the car its name.

WHEELS, TYRES & BRAKES

The unmarked, Ultra Lightweight 10-spoke alloy wheels are wrapped in Pirelli P-ZERO tyres, designed for extreme track focus.

The 720S benefits from a carbon fibre braking system as standard, greatly increasing stopping power and longevity compared with conventional steel setups.

HISTORY FILE

Originally supplied by McLaren Ascot on 18/09/2017, it is a launch edition car as denoted by its interior plaque and colour coding. In addition it was further specified with many additional options and carbon fibre packs and as such remains one of the highest spec'd 720 available today.

It's first service has been carried out earlier this year with the car still under McLaren warranty until September 2020.

With both keys all books and in as new condition it is ready to enjoy for the next owner at significantly less than its list price.

Please visit our website for a full write up and additional photographs.

The car is supplied having had an extensive intake inspection. Warranty, Finance, Part Exchange and Worldwide shipping are all available on request.
