The History

In April 1998, the new R129 model was presented at the Turin Motor Show, which benefited for the occasion from a new restyling, visible first of all for the new alloy wheels, in the oval-shaped tailpipe, in the new exterior mirrors and especially in the new three-valve-per-cylinder V6 and V8 engines.

The range thus starts again from the SL280 and SL320, of the same displacement, but with V-shaped engines instead of in-line. Higher up, the new SL500 with the new 306HP (V8 M113) and the SL600 still at the top, apart from the versions prepared by AMG.

Powered by a 6.0-liter V-12 engine and a significantly higher cost than the SL500, the SL600 was aimed at those few buyers who wanted to own the latest drop-top Mercedes-Benz, whatever the cost. While most SL600 were sold in 93-94, after the 1998 restyling, only 821 were delivered worldwide.

Our Mercedes-Benz 600SL

Matching Numbers & Matching Color.
