For the final year of production of the G-series, Porsche offered its customers a highly exclusive version in the form of a tribute to a legendary Porsche, the 911 Speedster. Returning to the principles of the 356 Speedster from the 1950s, the car had a low-swept windscreen and a rigid 'double bubble' tonneau cover, giving it a particularly distinctive look. Our Speedster was delivered new in Germany on 12 July 1989 by the Max Moritz dealership in Reutlingen. Finished in Indian red with a black leather interior, it is fitted with the optional short shift kit. It joined the collection of Eric Coicaud at the start of 2016 after two owners from Luxembourg. It was purchased by the current owner when Artcurial sold the Coicaud's Collection in 2016. Checked over 3 years ago by the IMSA Porsche dealership in Rouen - which had already serviced the car in 2016 - our road test confirmed that the model on offer is particularly sound and pleasant to drive; it appears to have come through the years without any deterioration. It has only 49,000 km on the odometer, which is supported by the stamps in the service booklet. The toolkit, both sets of keys and all its manuals, as well as a fitted cover, come with the car. With scarcely more than 2000 cars built, it is assuredly one of the rarest and most desirable 911 models, all the more so as it is presented at a simply irresistible estimated price.
