Mercedes-Benz G 500 Pick-Up: Plenty of room in the back...

15 November 2012 | Classic Driver

Mercedes' G-Wagen has become a design classic in its own right. German tuning company Wolf Factory has made a weapons-grade version: the utility vehicle to end all utility vehicles.

The matt-black monster, running on tyres big enough to ford the Nile, is based on the wheelbase of a five-door G Class, but with an extra flat load area built onto the back. Overall length has been increased to 6.3 metres.

German Shepherd apart, what would you place in it? Our guess is either a super-sized Weber grille, or The Scorpions' practice amp.
