Back in the early 1980s, classic car dealer and Alfa Romeo aficionado, Mike Lavers, came across a Gp.2 Alfa Romeo GTA race car through a contact in Italy. Having previously owned several of these evocative all-aluminium body homologation specials, his interest was heightened by the description of it being 'an old racer'. Sporting characteristic period race appointments such as wide wheel arch extensions, 13" x 9" alloy race wheels and a signature modification to the inner front wing to afford more space for extended carburettor intakes and airbox, Mike guessed that the car on offer was an original Gp.2 Alfa Romeo GTA Junior 1300cc race car. After cementing a deal and duly recovering the car to his Putney premises, he put the car away and started to delve into the car's history.

Certainly the many modifications carried out on this car appeared original and true to period. The deletion of the speedomete
