Footnote:

"Anyone who has driven a 959 on a variety of roads and especially in the wet knows how stunningly good it is as a complete ultra-high performance road car." Autocar, June 1988

Kevlar body panels, twin turbos, multi-mode four-wheel drive, adjustable ride height, Nomex floorpan, six-speed gearbox, hollow-spoked magnesium wheels - when the production version of the Porsche 959 was unveiled at the 1985 Frankfurt Motor Show, there were grounds for thinking it had arrived from a different planet rather than a late night truck from Zuffenhausen.

There was nothing like it, nothing with the same level of technology, no road car to match its performance until Ferrari, peeved that the 288 GTO had been comprehensively usurped from its position as the world's fastest road car, fought
