In 2007, Volkswagen celebrated their 60th anniversary by staging a huge event in Hanover, Germany. These celebrations included a concert by music legends The Who. This was a massive success, and the audience, made up of Who and VW fans alike, erupted when they performed their 1967 hit 'Magic Bus'. Though not originally about a VW, the classic track has become an anthem for VW bus owners, and links between The Who and the Volkswagen bus go back as far as 1965, and indeed, Roger Daltrey and Pete Townshend both enjoy VW ownership to this day.

After the celebrations the idea to create a 'real' magic bus came into being.

Roger Daltrey is a long standing patron of Teenage Cancer Trust, and with the help of Volkswagen Commercials AG, who donated the vehicle, the idea finally became reality. The Magic Bus would be raffled and the proceeds donated to TCT
