This car was designed as a non-running concept car by Pininfarina to celebrate their 50th anniversary and was presented at the Torino motor show in 1980. The car caused quite a stir being a 4 door Ferrari and featuring many aerodynamic tweaks such as disappearing windshield wipers and curved glass. Although speculation was high, the car was never put into production. After the show and a subsequent trip to the Los Angeles Auto Show it was put into storage in the Centro Studi Pininfarina where it remained, covered with a dust cloth, until it was discovered and purchased by Jaques Swaters in 1992. He put it in his personal Ferrari collection at his world famous Ferrari dealership in Brussels.

A few years ago, after the death of Jaques Swaters, the car was sold to its present owner who undertook at great personal expense the completion of
