Not only has the 911 now become seemingly immortal, but it has undergone the most rigorous development programme over its life of possibly any car. The 911SC was unveiled at the Frankfurt show in September 1977. Essentially this new 911 was very similar to the previous Carrera 3.0, with the same basic specifications, styling, and features. Power was up slightly from the previous 2.7 model with 180 horsepower on tap, and a flatter torque curve made the car much easier to drive. When compared to the 1977 Carrera 3.0, the SC was more luxurious and in 1979 the 911 SC's engine received modifications increasing the horsepower to 188 bhp while improving fuel economy by 10 percent. Further improvements in 1980 led to the SC producing 204 horsepower. This 1983 model is described by the vendor as being in very good condit
