Lamborghini's Islero was introduced in 1968 as a replacement for the 400 GT and was another successful interpretation of Gentleman's Express theme, with crisp styling featuring fashionable retractable headlights. The bodywork was made by Marazzi in Milan but the design was reputedly the work of Ferruccio himself, who wanted something to appeal more to the successful businessman than the rich playboy. Under the bonnet, the Islero used the Miura's 4 litre V12 motor with six
