For a modern production Ferrari to carry the name of the company's founder, it would need to encompass the entire history and philosophy of arguably the most famous car manufacturer and racing team in the world. As Steve Ahlgrim of Sports Car Market states: "The Enzo is an outstanding expression of a modern dual-purpose sports car and the epitome of that philosophy. Since its introduction, the Enzo has more than lived up to its esteemed name."

Initially announced at the 2002 Paris Motor Show with a limited production run of 349 units (eventually 399), the criteria for the Ferrari Enzo was that it should eclipse any Supercar in production with groundbreaking technological innovation, supreme design and performance, and that it must draw direct inspiration from Ferrari's then unbeatable Formula One racing p
