The Bentley Continental R was a large and expensive luxury coupé made for a limited period from 1991 to 2002. An enthusiastic reception from the motor show it was showcased at led the company to develop the vehicle for production as the Continental R. Based on the Bentley Turbo R floor pan, an aerodynamically shaped coupé body was styled. The "Continental" designation recalls the Bentley Continental of the post-war period. The car's body, styled by John Heffernan and Ken Greenley, was a departure for the marque. It had a slight curvature in stark contrast to the flat-sided Rolls-Royce and Bentley vehicles of the time. Its 0.73 coefficient of drag was a large i
