The MG X-Power SV was powered by a staggering 4.6-litre, 320 hp quad cam all-aluminum V8. The SV range featured an immensely strong box frame chassis allied to a uniquely constructed carbon fibre body shell which was instrumental in keeping the kerb weight to a competitive 1540kg and the centre of gravity as low as possible. In standard form, it sprinted from rest to 60mph in 5.3 seconds and on to a top speed of around 165mph. The range, according to MG, was aimed at individuals who share a passion for high performance sports cars and like to test a car's abilities to the full. It was described as an exhilarating, but above all responsive and well-mannered car that
