Arguably the most beautiful sports-racing car of all time, the Aston Martin DBR1 not only won the World Sportscar Championship in 1959 but also the prestigious Le Mans 24-Hour Race (driven by Carroll Shelby and Roy Salvadori) that same year. Only five were constructed, plus two of the larger-engined DBR2 version, and a veritable king's ransom would be required to purchase one today. This DBR1 re-creation has been constructed using a 1977 Aston Martin V8 as the donor vehicle. The latter's 5.3-litre engine breathes via a quartet of downdraft Weber carburettors and has been modified to accept a Canton Systems Oil Pressure Accumulator providing automatic pre-lube on start up and surge protection during high-speed cornering
