When Alfa Romeo introduced the coupe version of the Giulia sedan in 1963, a true star was born. Its lines were penned by a young designer at Bertone, Giugiaro, "the designer of the 20th century". The Giulia not only looked good but it also proved a great competitor in touring car racing. In the 14 years it was produced, the lines changed little but under the body it was constantly worked on with engines varying in size from 1.3 to 2.0 litre.

The 2000 GTV was the final version and replaced the 1750 GTV. The main differences between the two are the bored engine and a re-styled front grill. The Alfa Romeo 2000 GTV by Bertone is already a classic, but still very much undervalued. This very pretty and powerful I
