

CLASSIC DRIVER

Lotus Motorcycles C-01: A Tron-esque tribute to the glory years

Lead

The world's first Lotus-badged motorcycle is soon to enter limited series production, and will offer customers a choice of liveries inspired by the famous colours of Hethel's glory years...

Though not actually produced by Lotus – the name has been licensed to design and engineering company Kodewa, mastermind of Lotus' current Le Mans effort – the beefy new motorcycle will become the first two-wheeler to wear the famous yellow-and-green coat of arms. Going by the name of C-01, the bike not only boasts a 200bhp, 1,200cc V-twin engine, but also a distinctive carbonfibre and titanium body. While the latter displays classic undertones, it's also reminiscent of the futuristic machines seen in Tron: Legacy. That's because German designer Daniel Simon was responsible for both.

Provoking a livery debate

Some of the C-01's various liveries hark back to Lotus' most successful years in Formula 1, illustrated by the legendary trio seen here – although it seems there's been an oversight regarding the base colour of the Martini-style regalia. Should you want it corrected to the appropriate green (or replaced with any other bespoke design for that matter), a customisation service "limited only by the imagination of the client" is available.

The first C-01 has already been built and registered for the road. Prices are yet to be released, but the company has confirmed that no more than 100 will be made.

Photos: Lotus Motorcycles

Gallery

Source URL: <https://www.classicdriver.com/en/article/bikes/lotus-motorcycles-c-01-tron-esque-tribute-glory-years>
© Classic Driver. All rights reserved.