

CLASSIC DRIVER

Eve Concept by Bandit9 Motorcycles: Good morning, Saigon

08 March 2014 | Jan Baedeker

In Southeast Asia, the streetscape is dominated not by cars, but by motorcycles. In extreme cases, they're even used as a mode of transport for the whole family and fitted with roof-racks - but this Vietnam-designed bike is more of an out-and-out status symbol...

Named 'Concept Eve', the striking bike is the latest product from Saigon-based outfit Bandit9, and is based on a 1967 Honda SS. The long tank/seat combination is one of the many handmade chrome parts that sees this bike test the fine balance between usable product and work of art - but that only heightens its charming appeal. No more than nine 'Eves' will be produced, with engines of 90cc and 120cc available, and prices starting at $4,600.

<https://www.classicdriver.com/en/article/bikes/eve-concept-bandit9-motorcycles-good-morning-saigon>

© Classic Driver. All rights reserved.