

CLASSIC DRIVER

Shoot the breeze with the Holland & Holland Range Rover

Lead
Land Rover's Special Vehicle Operations unit has teamed up with British gunmaker Holland & Holland to create its most luxurious (and expensive) model to date...

Based on the Range-topping LWB Autobiography Black edition, the Holland & Holland shooting special will follow its predecessors by offering keen shots a host of bespoke enhancements.

Racking up the mileage

There are some discreet upgrades to the exterior – including an exclusive green paintjob, H&H badging and some chrome highlights – but the interior is where the collaboration between the two Royal Warrant-holders is most evident. Electronically deployed walnut tables serve the tan leather reclining rear seats, while a leather-trimmed aluminium loadspace cabinet slides out to present the guns within. Costing £180,000 and limited to 40 examples per year over three years, the Holland & Holland Range Rover is available with either the 334bhp 4.4-litre SDV8 diesel, or the 503bhp 5.0-litre Supercharged V8.

Photos: Land Rover

Gallery

Source URL: <https://www.classicdriver.com/en/article/cars/shoot-breeze-holland-holland-range-rover>
© Classic Driver. All rights reserved.