

CLASSIC DRIVER

Is John Cooper's last car the ultimate Mini Cooper?

20 May 2015 | George Chapman

A rather special (and not to mention fast) Mini Cooper is now available in the Classic Driver Market. According to the vendor, this 1998 Mini Cooper S is the last car tuned by John Cooper 'himself'...

Motor racing know-how

The late John Cooper, legendary Mini specialist and co-founder of British racing car manufacturer Cooper Car Company, first modified a Mini in 1961. His high-performance variants of the highly popular Mini later became world-famous following starring roles in the 1969 film, The Italian Job. The sale of this particular Mini Cooper S by Paris-based My Mini Revolution marks an exciting opportunity to acquire the last car owned by the legendary designer and tuner – featuring many unique performance parts. The car's odometer shows just 1,980 miles and, supposedly, more than £25,000 has been spent on the engine alone!

Photos: My Mini Revolution

<https://www.classicdriver.com/en/article/cars/john-coopers-last-car-ultimate-mini-cooper>

© Classic Driver. All rights reserved.