Model History

The 280SE versions of the W108 model series were equipped with a straight-six petrol engine sent to the rear wheels with a choice of manual and automatic gearboxes. The W108 series was manufactured between 1965 and 1972 and replace the W111 saloon series. Several versions were available 250, as 250S and 250SE and 280 S and SE, the latter being also offered with V8 engines of 3.5 and 4.5 liters of displacement. Its new body, designed by Paul Bracq was getting rid of the heckflosse body. A total of 91051 W108 series were manufactured.

Vehicle History

This Mercedes 280SE manufactured in 1971 is in outstanding condition. Its paint was redone in November 2014, differently from other elements kept in original condition. The interior is complete and was never restored or refurbished same goes for the engine as well as for the car's underbody. The condition of all those elements is breathtaking, same goes for most of its chromed elements. Car has antique papers, and was imported from Austria.
