Model History

The 400 body style at Ferrari was manufactured between 1976 and 1989. The 412 model, which is the direct evolution of the 400 model is a rare vehicle. Only 576 cars left the factory in Maranello. This four seater is animated by a V12 engine of 5 litres and 340 hp delivered to the rear wheels. Buyers had to choose between a three speed automatic gearbox and the five speed manual one. The important thing to notice is that the 412 was the first Ferrari to offer ABS system as the standard. To many enthusiasts the Pininfarina design is a perfect example of what a four seater coupe should look like. It's limited production makes the 412 a very interesting car to invest in.

Vehicle History

The Ferrari 412i offered at the National Stadium auction is an exceptional vehicle. This four seater coupe was manufactured in 1986. The car looks really outstanding, and its grigio color still shows its original shine. Its wheels have been refurbished recently. The Interior of this Ferrari also looks outstanding. The patinted leather ads a lot of charm to it. But the most important element is the transmission. This specimen is equipped with a rare manual gearbox. It is a very sought for version on the market right now. The car of course has some service history, but the important information to notice is that this Ferrari is fresh from Engine rebuilt. It is definitely a car for someone looking for a two door Grand Tourer to do long trips, for example around Europe.
