

CLASSIC DRIVER

On the Slow Burn with Icon 1000

20 October 2015 | Alex Easthope

Every builder of custom café racers will tell you about their unique style and philosophy, but one thing generally remains consistent (and we're not talking about the beards) - that any superfluous equipment is removed. This BMW R90/6 'Slow Burn' by Icon 1000 is no different...

A military vibe

Icon 1000 is a motorcycle apparel brand that occasionally builds off-the-wall concept café racers that don't take themselves too seriously. This Seventies BMW R90/6 - dubbed 'Slow Burn' - has a military vibe and boasts myriad modifications, including an extensively reworked frame, new mono-shock rear suspension and stubby exhaust tips from a Honda CRF450. Knobbly tyres, an oversized Hella front light, a subtly tweaked fuel tank, and rear cargo rack complete the look.

Photos: Icon 1000

<https://www.classicdriver.com/en/article/bikes/slow-burn-icon-1000>

© Classic Driver. All rights reserved.