Hexagon’s new London HQ is so much more than just a showroom...

Lead

The first stage of Hexagon Modern Classics’ new flagship showroom in London has been completed, promising to be not only the perfect premises from which to purchase a car, but also an automotive hub for collectors and enthusiasts alike...

Just the beginning

Paul Michaels and his team moved into the modern-looking showroom – located in Finchley, North London – last week. It’s already filled with beautiful classics, and a selection from Michaels’ collection of trademark modern art. And there’s more to come – work has already started on an adjoining showroom that will increase capacity to 50 cars, with a restaurant headed by a Michelin-starred chef, and a coffee bar. The latter should help Hexagon become the perfect meeting spot in London for enthusiasts, who’ll be able to shoot the breeze over an espresso, among the company’s wonderfully diverse inventory of classics and modern classics. We’ll be visiting the new premises for an in-depth feature in the near future, so keep your eyes peeled on Classic Driver over the coming months.
