These 10 Ferraris prove that green is the new red

Lead

Red is so last year. These 10 Ferraris from the Classic Driver Market demonstrate why green should be the new ‘must-have’ colour...

We’ve always thought Ferraris (particularly of the V12 variety) look great in darker, more understated colours. But while the company’s range of greys and blacks are pleasant, its greens are even more tasteful. Be it over tan or burgundy leather, the colour just works. The preserve of the true connoisseur, they’ve also historically been – and probably always will be – much rarer. If only more customers were brave enough to tick the box more often.

To give you an idea of what we mean, we’ve chosen 10 green Ferraris from the Classic Driver Market in a variety of hues, from a simply stunning ‘short nose’ 1965 275 GTB resplendent in its original shade of Verde Pino, to an ultra-rare Verde Abetone 458 Italia.
