

CLASSIC DRIVER

Sydney bikers refuel themselves at the Deus Bar & Kitchen

Lead

A new bar and kitchen has opened adjoining the famous Deus Ex Machina motorcycle shop in the trendy Camperdown suburb of Sydney, which we're sure will become a hub for bearded bikers across the country...

Fuel station

Serving breakfast, lunch and dinner to hungry bikers and locals alike, the Deus Bar & Kitchen was founded by Tom Walton – the man behind the popular 'Bucket List' on Bondi Beach – in collaboration with Andy Ruwald and James Prier. The fusion Middle Eastern/Mediterranean menu looks fabulous, as do the cocktails, which are strictly for consumption once your leathers are off.

The studio-gram-designed space is bright and airy, and ties some of its elements to the machines sold at the shop next door – the leather footrests, for example. It's a welcome addition to the city for Sydney-based motorcycle fiends. After all, it's not just the bikes that need fuelling.

Photos: Deus Ex Machina

Gallery

Source URL: <https://www.classicdriver.com/en/article/bikes/sydney-bikers-refuel-themselves-deus-bar-kitchen>
© Classic Driver. All rights reserved.