Who doesn't want a Fiat 500 in their living room?

Lead

When converting a building, its common practice to pay respects to the origins of the property. In the case of this Lisbon garage conversion, there was no better way to do this than have a Fiat 500 sit pride of place inside...

Location, location, location

Designed by architect Fala Atelier, the property retains its original 1950s garage door in the front, allowing light to be delightfully siphoned through the square-cut glass and preserving the building's past. With its cement floors and white walls, the house keeps an industrial element whilst also offering a homely environment. And there is surely no finer addition to such a modern home than a most classic design, the Fiat 500...
