The Ngoni yacht takes Beast Mode to a whole new level

Lead

When the designers at Royal Huisman were given the orders to build an edgy and innovative beast for the water, they let their imaginations run wild, and the result is pretty fantastic. Part cuttlefish, part shark, part mermaid — the Ngoni yacht is the ultimate nautical creature...

No sheep in wolf’s clothing

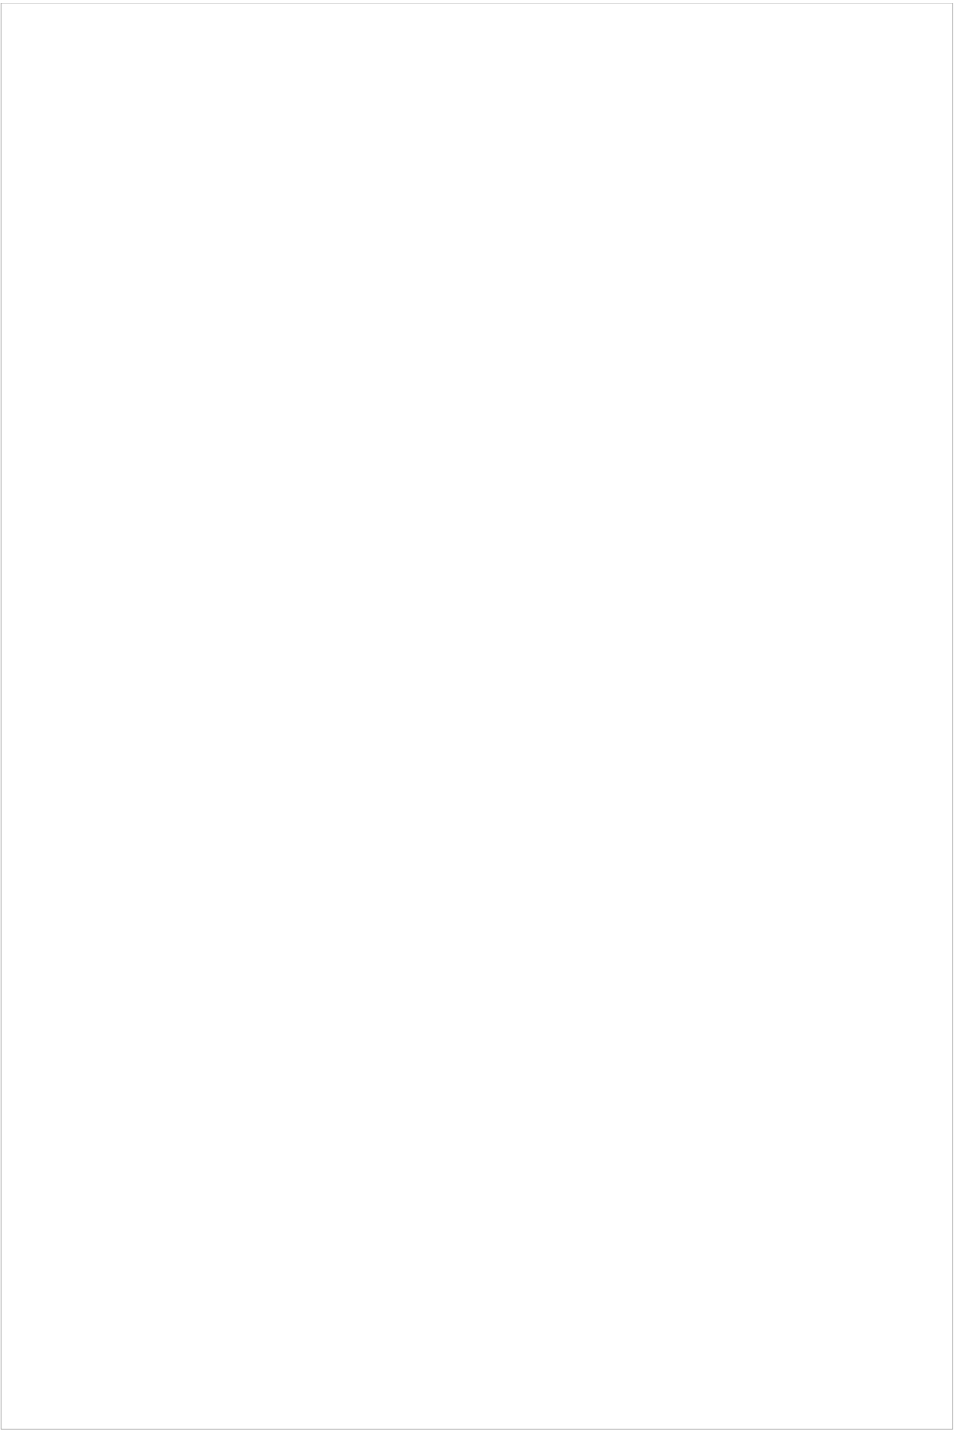

Designed by Dubois Naval Architects and built by Royal Huisman, with the interior by Rick Baker Ltd, the 190ft Ngoni is a beautiful mixture of high performance and luxury in one. Finished in a 'Claire de Lune' reverse sheer, its slender hull reflects its surroundings and creates a camouflage effect — perfect for the private owner who wants to escape for a while. With a twin guest cabin with en suite, double guest cabin with en suite, owner's cabin with a full bathroom, a gym, and a study below deck, there's little need to go above, except for maybe the fold-out bathing platform, spa pool, beach deck, Olympic diving board, and deckhouse with bar dining, and sitting areas — not to mention the gorgeous surroundings in which you'll find yourself when out to sea. You'd be hard-pressed to find another beast like it out on the open water...
