This Ferrari F12 Berlinetta is a Supreme being

29 January 2018 | Lianna Bruhlman

From bags and shoes to skateboards and brick sculptures, the Louis Vuitton and Supreme collaboration collection has been one of the most talked-about and desired fashion trends of 2018. Now, the car world wants in on the action...

When the collaboration first launched in summer 2017, 16-year-old YouTuber Rashed Belhasa (Money Kicks) saw a trend in the making and decided to be the first to bring the Louis Vuitton X Supreme design to his car — a Ferrari F12 Berlinetta. And while the car garnered mass amounts of attention online, with over six million views of his vlog on the Ferrari, like most young people, Belhasa’s interest in the car soon started to wane and he began looking for his next big acquisition. So, five months later and the car is now listed for sale with the Dubai dealership Deals on Wheels for 152,500 euros — what’s Belhasa’s loss is some other Louis Vuitton lover’s gain...
