New versions of the Alpine A110 can be seen this week at the Geneva Motor Show, with customers now being able to choose between comfort, purist, and sports racer variants...

The return of the legendary Alpine has been one of the most successful automotive surprises in recent years. In Geneva, the Alpine A110 is now being offered in three versions: a grand touring or 'Légende' version, a lightweight sports version known as 'Pure', and a race track-worthy GT4 version. The two civilian variants are powered by the same 1.8-liter mid-engine, which can produce around 250hp, while the racing version is set to bring about 266hp to the asphalt.
