Celebrating its 91st anniversary and 36th modern edition this year, the legendary Mille Miglia will start tomorrow. And our resident photographer Rémi Dargegen will be on hand to document all the Italian motoring fun...

Brescia-Parma

Over 450 entrants will gather together over the next two days to prepare for an unforgettable four-day, 1,000-mile journey throughout the stunning Italian landscape. And while these entrants will embark on a truly once-in-a-lifetime experience, with red lights waived, police escorts employed, and enthusiastic crowds lining the route to cheer them on, just as they did all those years ago, they'll also go through the most strenuous and difficult four days of their lives, with long stretches at the wheel, stunted overnight rest stops, and challenging regularity time trials. It's a true test of stamina and endurance for both man and machine, and Rémi Dargegen will be on hand to document it all. Keep your eyes on our Instagram account for all the action surrounding the Mille Miglia.
