Description

In 1989, Porsche redesigned its legendary 911. The 964 generation brought more power and a more sophisticated rear suspension design, featuring coil springs in place of the traditional torsion bars. Though the classic body shape remained, it was modernized with smoothly integrated bumpers. The next year, the mighty Turbo returned to the lineup with a 320 hp, 3.3-liter turbocharged engine.

Never resting on its laurels, Porsche improved the model again in 1993, with the Turbo now displacing 3.6 liters and producing 355 hp, enough to launch it to 60 mph in just four seconds and propel it to a top speed of 174 mph. That incredible performance, along with its updated suspension and massive brakes, made the 911 Turbo 3.6 one of the most potent sports cars of its time.

Maintained in a significant private collection boasting the finest, most desirable 911 models, this wonderfully preserved 1994 Porsche 911 Turbo 3.6 displays less than 7,000 miles. Further bolstering its already strong appeal are its books, tool kit, CARFAX Vehicle History Report, and service records, which show the care the Porsche has received in current ownership. Finished in classic Guards Red with Cashmere Beige supple leather upholstery, this Turbo 3.6 represents an incredible opportunity to acquire a time capsule example of Porsche's iconic flagship.
