

Luftgekühlt is headed to Munich

17 August 2018

Jan Baedeker

Although Hamburg is known for having the highest density of Porsches in Germany, the first Luftgekühlt on German soil will be held in the great city of Munich, much to the delight of its air-cooled community!

Breathe it all in!

The first Luftgekühlt on Porsche's home soil will take place on 16 September in Munich. After Patrick Long and his team experienced the great British weather first-hand at the European debut of the cult air-cooled Porsche gathering at Bicester Heritage in July, they'll be hoping for brighter skies come September. Munich's Porsche community no doubt cried out a collective hosanna when they heard the news, before heading out to quickly clean their 356s and 911s. More details to follow...

Photos: Robert Cooper for Classic Driver © 2018

Source URL: <https://www.classicdriver.com/en/article/cars/luftgekuehlt-headed-munich>
© Classic Driver. All rights reserved.