Capture the ‘Big Five’ in style with Leica’s M10-P Safari

Lead

For its latest limited-edition camera, Leica has given the M10-P the safari treatment, decking the entire body out in olive green enamel and leather. So, whether you’re on the plains of Africa or the urban jungle of East London, blending in has never looked so good...

Stylish safari

It’s funny how removing the signature red Leica logos and shutter buttons and colouring the entire body unit olive green lends the stylish camera such a robust aesthetic, one that wouldn’t look out of place in the depths of the Serengeti. Of course, the M10-P is a very robust camera, especially when paired with the durable (and matching green) Summicron-M 50mm f/2 lens with which this Safari is equipped. Leica will build just 1,500 M10-P Safari cameras, each priced north of 8,000 euros.
