Description

"W124 is the Mercedes-Benz internal chassis designation for the 1984/85 to 1995/96 version of the Mercedes-Benz E-Class and it was the first generation to be officially referred to as E-Class. The estate cars came in five or seven seat models, the seven seater having a rear-facing bench seat that folded flush, a luggage compartment cover and an optional (in the US until 1994) retractable cargo net. To provide a flat loading floor with the seat folded down, the T-model's rear seat squab was mounted about 10cm higher than in saloons, robbing rear seat passengers of some head room. This lovely example of this popular and now very retro classic is presented in silver with black leather interior. This car is fitted with the desirable seven seat option which is situated in the boot compartment, perfect for growing families or giving lifts to the pub or play dates for your children! This model has cruise control, air conditioning, electric seats, electric sunroof and electric windows. It is fitted with the smooth three litre straight six engine and is great for those long journeys which these practical family cars are famous for. These models are very understated and hard to find in this condition.
