Description

The Tatra 613 was a large luxury rear wheel driven car, with rear mounted air-cooled engine manufactured by Czechoslovak manufacturer Tatra from the 1970s to the 1990s, as a replacement for the Tatra 603 series. It featured an all new body styled by Vignale of Italy and used a dohc air-cooled 3.5-liter V8 engine with 165 hp. Later injection versions reached 200 hp, with max. speed of 230 km/h. The design was updated a further five times until being replaced by the Tatra 700 in 1996, itself a restyled T613-5.

The Tatra 613 vehicles were mostly used by government officials, industry executives and in limited numbers, were also used as police cars and as the rapid response fire fighting and rescue vehicles during motorsport events. One of approximately 11,000 ever produced and 500 in its model year, this T613-3, which is finished in black with grey interior. It is a very rare car indeed. Its 3.5-liter air-cooled 165bhp V8 engine would make this a very fast and fun car to drive.
