Description

Chassis no. 2469870

Engine no. 100D Registered new in Veneto in 1970.

Sporting the charming original color combination of yellow over blue cloth/vinyl interiors.

Bodywork, interiors and mechanics completely restored, through work completed in 2018.

One of the best-known models of the "Spiaggine", large series cars bodied to be suitable for carefree summer use.

Model created on the wishes of Gianni Agnelli and dressed by the historic Turin-based firm Carrozzeria Savio.

First and purest series. Equipped with the four-cylinder, 767 cc 600D engine with chain distribution.

This engine was used on the "600D" and also on the Fiat 800 and 770 manufactured in Argentina.

Around 3,200 specimens were built between 1965 and 1974, featuring different mechanics and specifications.

Ready to use, perhaps for a trip to the sea...

Well prepared, even in its smaller details.

With the standard features of a fold-down windshield, The Jungla 600 rests on two grommets attached to the hood, a Fiat 500 odometer placed to the right of the steering wheel, and a series of warning lights (oil, fuel reserve, dynamo, high beam and radiator water temperature). It has just one windshield wiper with a visible motor and an external spare wheel anchored to the trunk.
