Description

Porsche introduced the successor to the 356 to the market in 1963. At that point, its type designation was 901, but it was soon changed to 911. And this gave us the most iconic sports car model in history.

There have been several generations of the 911 over the years. The first series was supplied with a powerful 2.0 litre 6-cylinder engine and delivered around 130 hp. This would soon progress through 2.2 litres to the final 2.4 litres, delivering 190 hp in the S model.

The second generation - also known as the 'G series' - was available from the model year 1974 and was fitted initially with a 2.7 litre engine and then a 3.0 litre engine, raising the power output to 204 hp from 1978.

The model was available in both Coupé and Targa formats, but in 1983, the 'Super Carrera' was available for just 1 year in a full cabrio version.

"Collection by Vermant" is delighted to be able to offer this Porsche 911 'Super Carrera' Convertible, dating from February 1983. This is an example of the 'G model', fitted with its powerful 'matching numbers' 3.0 litre 6-cylinder engine, developing 204 hp. The transmission is assured by a perfectly operating 915 type gearbox.

The car was supplied new in Italy on 4 February 1983 and is finished in 'Grand Prix White' with a black leather interior.

The SC was also fitted with a number of options including tinted windows and a stronger battery. A couple of years ago a tripmaster was installed.

This 911 Cabrio has only been driven 160,00 proven kilometres and the car is still in a very good and correct condition.

The car has also recently undergone a major overhaul in our own workshop, so that this special 911 is all set for carefree driving pleasure.
