James Bond has a new watch...

Lead

With a new James Bond film inevitably comes a new Omega watch. For the forthcoming title No Time to Die, Daniel Craig will have a special edition Seamaster Diver 300M 007 Edition affixed to his wrist. Here's hoping the bracelet's strong enough...

No Time to Die

In April 2020, Daniel Craig will return to the silver screen as James Bond in No Time to Die. We've already had a glimpse at the plethora of exotic (and predominantly Aston Martin-badged) cars in the film after seeing the first trailer earlier this week. And now we've got the watch agent 007 will wear on his no-doubt tumultuous travels. It's a special edition version of the Seamaster Diver 300M Co-Axial Master Chronometer featuring a matte black dial and bezel with aged lume markings and a very pretty titanium mesh bracelet. It's a watch that while not as elegant as the Seamaster 300 Bond wore in 2015's Spectre is a bit beefier and in line with the gritty character of the Craig-era films. The Seamaster Diver 300M 007 Edition will cost 8,100 US dollars on a NATO strap and 9,200 dollars on the bracelet.
