Description

- The New 500 was also developed for the English market, where cars were supplied with right-hand drive, like the car offered here.
- Originally white in colour, during the recent restoration it was given new two-tone paintwork. Without any trace of rust, all its components are sound.
- Interior restored and in conformity with the original.
- Equipped with original engine.
- Offered without logbook or documents.
- Japan, UK, Australia, are the best known markets for right-hand drive cars, but even in Italy a 500 right-hand drive car stands out in a special way. Born in 1960, the New 500 D was the model that revived the commercial fortunes of the New 500, launched just 3 years earlier with an uncertain commercial fate. Redesigned in many details, the D was presented in the right way on the market, thanks also to the redesigned engine and steering linkage success was not far off.
