Description

Car number 155 - an extremely rare and original Mitsubishi Lancer FQ-300Evo VII Supplied new in March 2003 by UK importer, Ralliart Finished in Phoenix Red with a Blue Hessian/Grey Alcantara Recaro interior 13,806 miles with an outstanding service history detailed in its original service book Most recently serviced in March 2020 at 13,557 miles Comprehensive Owner's File. Original hand-pack with manuals, service records and invoices Original, unmolested, low mileage and in spectacularly good condition The Mitsubishi Lancer Evolution is often referred to as just the Evo and is a cult four-door saloon produced between 1992-2016 in various incarnations (ten in total), all based on the 2-litre turbocharged four-cylinder engine, a close-ratio 5-speed gearbox and all-wheel drive. In many ways, it took over from the Ford Sierra Cosworth as the ultimate 'Q' car of the day. The Evo VII was launched and updated for the purposes of homologating key rally components back in 2001 and these included multiple chassis upgrades. The biggest change was the addition of an active centre differential and a more effective limited-slip differential, while a front helical LSD was added. A substantial 276bhp and 284lbs feet of torque were now being fed through the new drive train, all hiding under the newly sculpted bonnet with no air grilles giving the car a smooth purposeful look. Many cars were modified for racing or rallying, so original cars are hard to find yet this is exactly what we have here. This original car was supplied new in March 2003 by UK importer, Ralliart. This is car number 155 - an extremely rare and original Mitsubishi Lancer FQ-300, an Evo VII with an outstanding service history in the original service book which confirms that it has been serviced on time and by official agents throughout its life. Most recently serviced in March 2020 at 13,557 miles, it has since covered just a handful of miles and today reads 13,806. The mileage is confirmed by this history and is therefore warranted as genuine. It's supplied with its original hand-pack containing the handbook/owners manual, other original documents and the service record. The comprehensive history file has copies of all of the service invoices going back many years and pleasingly confirms this car has been extremely well cared for and maintained throughout. It's superbly finished in Phoenix Red with a Blue Hessian/Grey Alcantara Recaro interior and remains in spectacularly good condition, almost showroom fresh. The Evo VII is now an established classic, yet is still an exciting modern car that can out drag most current four-door saloons. If you haven't ever had one - why not start with the best? Happiness and serious thrills guaranteed.
