Description

One of the last Series 1 Land Rovers produced before the introduction of the Series 2 Ground-up restoration completed on a new chassis. Beautifully detailed throughout including the often ignored engine bay. Totally retrimmed interior. New Exmoor Canvas hood with rear window fitted. New tyres all round. Unleaded head conversion. Not a trailer Queen, just a thoughtfully restored early car that's now ready for anything. This particular Land Rover is one of the last Series 1s to leave the production line and was registered on the first of January 1958 as 707 AYA, a number it still proudly wears today. It has been restored over the last few years with serious input to try and achieve dent-free panels, a rare thing indeed on an early Land Rover! It retains its original rear tub sitting on a new chassis with almost everything else being replaced as required as you might expect of a true workhorse that is now a little over sixty years old. Externally, all the steel trims and canopy bars were galvanised before attention was paid to achieving a top class paint finish to the remainder of the Land Rover. Internally the front seats and rear benches have been retrimmed and a new Exmoor Canvas hood with rear window fitted. It is often said that the devil is in the detail and this certainly applies here with the engine bay being as clean and as tidy as the remainder of the vehicle, even down to the correct-type rubber cased battery. All wheels have been refurbished and now wear new tyres, even the bonnet mounted spare. As you would expect all mechanical aspects have been checked over and the engine was fitted with an 'unleaded' conversion along the way. Photographs pre-restoration are included as is a detailed owner trace from the DVLA. Often restored and rebuilt but rarely to this standard, an exceptional Series 1 88 that is now ready to be enjoyed once again, be that on the show circuit or worrying the pheasants down a country lane!
