

CLASSIC DRIVER

This top-secret Ferrari bunker has its own racetrack

Lead
Getting to sneak a peak of a collectors private garage is always a challenge, so we were extra excited to be given this glimpse of a top-secret underground bunker that has its own racetrack entrance.

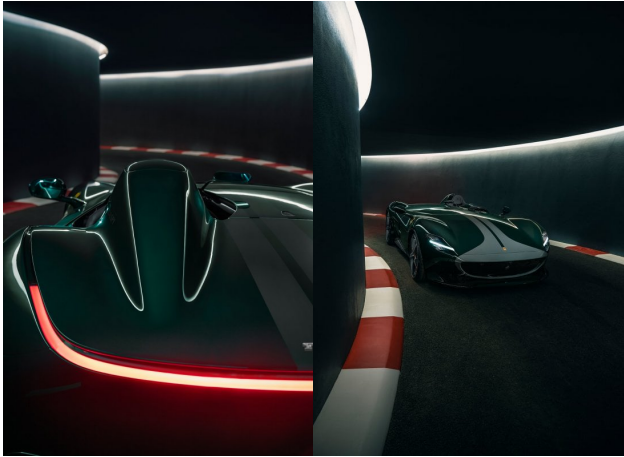

You would be forgiven for thinking that GFWilliams' latest shoot was in Abu Dhabi at the iconic Yas Marina circuit designed by Hermann Tilke, but infact this top-secret bunker resides somewhere in Europe.

The private collector didn't want to have a lift installed to be able to access the collection, instead choosing to build a 200m long 'racetrack' style entrance, with a gentle gradient to allow trouble free access for the stunning collection of rare Ferrari models.

Focusing on the very best that Ferrari has built in the last 40 years the collection has been steadily grown from the essentials like the F40, F50 and Enzo to more recent additions like a Blu Elettrico La Ferrari and the stunning Verdi SP1 pictured below.

Photos: GFWilliams © 2021

Gallery

