The 1960'r Lincoln Continental Convertible is seen by many as the biggest car ever built. This car can very well be seen as the ultimate American highway cruiser and it comes from the golden days of tail fins and perfectly styled headlights.

The Lincoln was more expensive than the comparable Cadillacs at the time and there have been only 2044 productions.

The Lincoln is factory-off packed with luxury options as electric windows, electrically adjustable seats, electrically controlled convertible top, air conditioning, a 'Breeze Away' window, power steering and power brakes.

The huge electrically operated convertible top is in a very good condition, and has a wonderful 'Breeze Away' window. It still works perfectly.

The paint of Lincoln is very well maintained and shines just like the chrome beautifully. The original, very powerful 7 liter Ford engine is very beloved and runs just perfect.
It has a fabulous sound, and will definitely draw some attention.
The transmission shifts perfectly.

The interior of the Lincoln is very comfortable. The seats are like new.
The beautiful and huge dashboard is in a very good condition and everything else like the carpet, the door panels and the headliner are also in very well maintained.

The Lincoln has a beautiful wide white wall tires with original hubcaps.
