The 100-6 BN4, which was introduced to replace the Austin-Healey 100, was instantly recognizable to the public as an Austin-Healey, but it introduced several compelling improvements. Chief amongst these improvements would be its six-cylinder engine. Further improvements included the addition of two small rear seats, a fixed windshield, and a wider radiator grille that was mounted in a slightly lower location compared to its predecessor. Where the 100 was a sports car through and through, the 100-6 was clearly intended to provide comforts for longer drives, while still maintaining the 100's sporting character.

The magnificent 1957 Austin Healey 100-6 BN4 Roadster featured here is finished in classic and desired Healey Blue over white with gorgeous blue leather interior. This motorcar was recently restored with no expense spared, and special attention was paid to drivability. Upgrades include chrome wire wheels, five-speed manual transmission, and more. We are proud to offer this incredible investment-grade 1957 Austin Healey 100-6 BN4 Roadster to the most particular collector investor or enthusiast who desires the very best.
