The turbo-look option, like the one on this 1985 Porsche 911 Carrera 3.2, was extremely expensive. Prices for the M491 option ranged from $10,000 to $15,000 extra, depending on the year that you ordered your Porsche. The options that came with the "look" were: the wide-body, turbo whale-tail, turbo wrap-around chin spoiler, turbo suspension, wheels and tires, turbo brakes with cross-drilled rotors and four-piston calipers, and a noticeable improvement in handling over the standard Carrera.

The magnificent 1985 Porsche 911 Carrera 3.2 turbo-bodied Cabriolet featured here is finished in classic and desired Guards Red over black leather interior with matching folding convertible top. This example is a highly desirable European model that has been meticulously maintained and recently serviced. It has been fitted with nearly every desirable option, including the M491 turbo body option. We are proud to offer this investment-grade Porsche to the most discerning collector, investor, or enthusiast who appreciates low miles and superior condition.
