Down the finishing order of the 1970 12-hours of Sebring was Porsche 906 driven by Dr Merv Rosen and Stephen Behr. The Porsche 906 endurance racer had an interesting history, as a lighter and faster evolution of the 904. It was lighter because of its fibreglass bodywork and was generally powered by a 2 litre flat-6 engine, although it made the occasional outing with a flat-8 under bonnet.

Our expertise in CGI and 3D modelling means we can recreate and digitalize any moment from history. We spend many hours researching to be as accurate as possible, perfecting every single detail imaginable. With this, we're able to use our highly detailed models to create animations, social media content, behind the scenes documentaries, and more - taking them beyond just being a piece of artwork.
