The BMW Isetta is today a highly sought-after classic car. This Munich microcar mixed an intelligent concept with the elegance of simplicity, representing a real futuristic car for its time.

Isetta is an Italian diminutive form that comes from the Iso. BMW decided to add a wheels on the rear of the car, from the Italian Isetta: the original had only three, while the German version came out of the factory with four wheels. With 10,000 units sold in the first year of production, Isetta initially conquered the hearts of the Germans, and then spread to other countries and in eight years a total of 161,728 cars were sold. To this day, it is one of the best-selling single-cylinder micro-cars in the world. In 1962, with the end of the production, the era of small bubble cars ended.

- This is a very beautiful example of conservative restoration on a BMW Isetta
